LIGHTHOLDER ART STUDIO

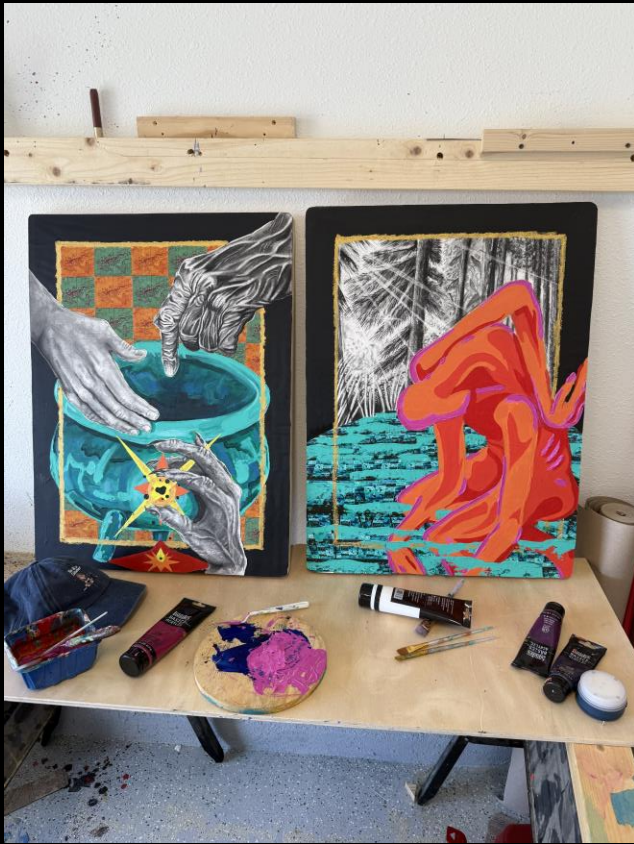

ABOUT ME

Austin Lightholder is a multidisciplinary artist working across painting, sculpture, drawing, and mixed media. His work explores mythology, history, and universal themes, drawing connections between ancient stories and contemporary experience.

Through layered materials, symbolic imagery, and bold visual language, he creates works that investigate transformation, memory, and the human condition. Lightholder's practice is driven by curiosity, experimentation, and a fascination with the enduring lessons found within myths and shared cultural narratives.

PROCESS

Lightholder's process begins with observation and experience. Drawing inspiration from reading, meditation, travel, and time spent in nature, he develops ideas through reflection and study before bringing them into the studio. Concepts often emerge before materials, leading each project to become an exploration of how form, surface, and medium can best communicate a particular idea.

Working across painting, collage, drawing, and sculpture, he carefully balances narrative, symbolism, and composition. Acrylic paint, layered collage, and detailed mark-making function as a visual language through which themes of mythology, transformation, and shared human experience are explored.

ALCHEMY OF PERCEPTION

First presented at the Museum of Contemporary Art Jacksonville, Alchemy of Perception is a series of eight works centered on transformation. Through varied imagery and symbolism, the works investigate processes of change, personal growth, and the ways experience continually reshapes perception.

ROMULUS & REMUS

Conviction, Reaction, Choice, Change, part of the Perception of Alchemy series, features twin portraits of the Wolf brothers, Romulus and Remus, and explores the tension within conflict and the balance it demands.

Created with thick layers of paint, heavily textured collage, vibrant color, expressive charcoal drawing, and mixed media, the piece embodies both struggle and transformation.

PERCEPTION

This piece is extremely interactive, and experimental. Every choice in this work was designed to trap those who look at it - with a surface that physically wraps around your field of vision.

Part of the Perception of Alchemy body of work, this piece examines the suggestibility of perception and how easily our experience of reality can be altered by context, expectation, and belief.

SCROLLING PARALYSIS

Exhibited at Untitled Gallery in downtown Jacksonville, this work commands attention through its scale, material presence, and contrast. A heavily textured surface serves as the backdrop for two powerful arms rendered in rich charcoal on stark white paper.

The interplay between texture, light, and dark amplifies the work's physical and emotional presence, drawing the viewer into its tension and gesture.

This body of work brings together two materials that represent opposing but connected forces. The nail embodies the physical world — force, action, structure, and permanence. Yarn represents the unseen: fate, connection, tension, and transformation.
